

It's a shame we the consumer can't decide what we want, and have to be bullied into what we can hear or see. I bought into satellite radio for the the clarity and the lack of junk and repeditiveness I hear on am and fm. This is supposed to be a free country, so I feel I should be able to get my information wherever I want. I still listen to the local stations for weather and sports info, but it's great to be able to have a clear sound whenever I want. Let things stand. The amount of info they carry for traffic and weather is not going to hurt those big boys and girls, it will be the lack of quality of what they put on there stations.
